Common Grounds: On Site

An open call for active participation in a postgraduate research colloquium.

Common Grounds is an opportunity to collaborate with postgraduate students and other early-career researchers in exploring what it means to engage in situated/active spatial research, and what might be gained through a propositional or praxis-led research agenda. Researchers that actively engage on and with site, people and place are encouraged to apply from any 'spatial' discipline (including activists, architects, artists, geographers, landscape architects, performers, planners, sociologists, and others).
